

WEA

4. Causing weariness; tiresome.
Their gates to all were open evermore
That by the weary way were travelling
And one fat waiting ever them before
To call in comers by that needy were and poor. Fa. Queen.
The weary and most loathed life
That age, ach, penury, imprisonment,
Can lay on nature, is a paradise.
To what we fear of death. Shakespeare.
Put on what weary negligence you please,
You and your fellows; I'd have it come to question. Shak.
WEA'VEL. n. f. [perel, Saxon; wesfel, Dutch; muffela, Latin.]
A small animal that eats corn and kills mice.
Ready in gybes, quick-answer'd, faucy, and
As quarrellous as the wasp. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.
In at a corn loft through a chink. Pope.
WE'ASD. n. f. [payen, Saxon.] This word is is very variously written; but this orthography is nearest to the original word.
The windpipe; the passage through which the breath is drawn and emitted.
Marry Diagon, what should him affray,
To take his own where-ever it lay;
For had his weasand been a little wider,
He would have devoured both hider and shider. Spenser.
Cut his weasand with thy knife. Shakespeare's Tempest.
Matter to be discharged by expectoration must first pass into the lungs, then into the aspera arteria, or weasand, and from thence be coughed up and spit out by the mouth. Wifem.
The shaft that slightly was impress'd,
Now from his heavy fall with weight increas'd,
Drove through his neck a flint; he spurns the ground,
And the soul flies through the weasand's wound. Dryden.
The unerring steel defended while he spoke,
Pierc'd his wide mouth, and through his weasand broke.
Dryden.
WEATHER. n. f. [yescen, Saxon.]
1. State of air, respecting either cold or heat, wet or drinels.
Who's there, besides foul weather?—One mended like the weather, most unquietly. Shakespeare. King Lear.
I am far better born than is the king;
But I must make fair weather yet a while,
Till Henry be more weak and I more strong. Shakespeare.
Men must content themselves to travel in all weathers, and through all difficulties. L'Estrange.
The sun
Foretells the change of weather in the skies,
Through mists he shoots his fullen beams,
Suspect a drilling day. Dryden.
2. The change of the state of the air.
It is a reverend thing to see an ancient castle not in decay;
how much more to behold an ancient family, which have stood against the waves and weathers of time? Bacon.
3. Tempest; storm.
What gusts of weather from that gathering cloud,
My thoughts preface. Dryden's Virgil.
To WEATHER. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To expose to the air.
He perch'd on some branch thereby,
To weather him and his moist wings to dry. Spenser.
Mustard-seed gather for being too ripe,
And weather it well, yet ye give it a stripe. Tusser.
2. To pass with difficulty.
He weather'd fell Charibdis; but ere long,
The skies were darkened, and the tempests strong. Garth.
Could they weather and stand the flock of an eternal duration, and yet be at any time subject to a dissolution. Hale.
3. To WEATHER a point. To gain a point against the wind;
to accomplish against opposition.
We have been tugging a great while against the stream, and have almost weather'd our point; a stretch or two more will do the work. Addison.
4. To WEATHER out. To endure.
When we have pass'd these gloomy hours,
And weather'd out the storm that beats upon us. Addison.
WEATHERBEATEN. adj. Harassed and seasoned by hard weather.
They perceived an aged man and a young, both poorly arrayed, extremely weatherbeaten, the old man blind, the young man leading him. Sidney.
She enjoys sure peace for evermore,
As weatherbeaten ship arrived on happy shore. Fairy Queen.
Thrice from the banks of Wye,
And sandy bottom'd Severn, have I lent
Him boodles home, and weatherbeaten back. Shak. H. IV.
I hope when you know the world, you will at once leap into the river, and swim through handomely, and not weatherbeaten with the divers blasts of irresolution, stand shivering upon the brink. Suckling.
A weatherbeaten vessel holds.
Gladly the port. Milton.

WEA

- Dido received his weatherbeaten troops. Dryden's Virgil.
The old weatherbeaten soldier carries in his hand the Roman eagle. Addison.
WEATHERBOARD, or Weatherbow. n. f. In the sea language, that side of a ship that is to the windward. Dict.
WEATHERCOCK. n. f. [weather and cock.]
1. An artificial cock set on the top of a spire, which by turning shows the point from which the wind blows.
But alas! the sun keeps his light, though thy faith be darkened; the rocks stand still, though thou change like a weathercock. Sidney.
A kingfisher hanged by the bill, converting the breast to that point of the horizon from whence the wind doth blow, is a very strange introducing of natural weathercocks. Brown.
2. Any thing fickle and inconstant.
Where had you this pretty weathercock?—I cannot tell what his name is my husband had him of. Shakespeare.
He break my promise and above my vow!
The word which I have given shall stand like fate,
Not like the king's that weathercock of state. Dryden.
WEATHERDRIVEN. part. Forced by forms or contrary winds.
Philip, during his voyage towards Spain, was weather-driven into Weymouth. Carew's Survey of Cornwall.
WEATHERGAGE. n. f. [weather and gage.] Any thing that shews the weather.
To vere and tack, and steer a caufe,
Against the weathergage of laws. Hudibras.
WEATHERGLASS. n. f. [weather and glass.] A barometer.
As in some weatherglass my love I hold,
Which falls or rises with the heat or cold,
I will be constant yet
John's temper depended very much upon the air; his spirits rose and fell with the weatherglass. Arbutnot.
We shall hardly wish for a perpetual equinox to save the charges of weatherglass; for the two equinoxes of our year are the most windy and tempestuous. Bentley's Sermon.
WEATHERSPY. n. f. [weather and spy.] A star-gazer; an astrologer; one that foretels the weather.
And sooner may a gulling weather-spy,
By drawing forth heav'n's scheme tell certainly,
What fashion'd hats or ruffs, or suits next year,
Our giddy-headed antick youth will wear. Dominie.
WEATHERWISE. adj. [weather and wise.] Skillful in foretelling the weather.
WEATHERWISER. n. f. [weather and wiser, Dutch; to show.]
Most vegetables expand their flowers and down in warm sun shiny weather, and again close them toward the evening, or in rain, as is in the flowers of pimpernel, the opening and shutting of which are the countryman's weather-wiser.
Dorham's Physico-Theology.
To WEAVE. v. a. Preticite wove, waved, part. pass. wove, waved; [yegan, Saxon; woven, Dutch.]
1. To form by texture; to form by inserting one part of the materials within another.
Here in her hairs
The painter plays the spider, and hath woven
A golden mesh to intrap the hearts of men,
Faster than gnats in cobwebs. Shakespeare.
The women wove hangings for the grove. 2 Kings xxiii. 7.
White seem'd her robes, yet woven so they were,
As snow and gold together had been wrought. Dryden.
These purple veils were waved by Dardan dames.
Dryden.
Dan Pope for thy misfortune griev'd,
With kind concern and skill has waved
A silken web; and ne'er shall fade
Its colours; gently has he laid
The mantle o'er thy sad distress;
And Venus shall the texture bless. Prior.
2. To unite by intermixture.
When religion was woven into the civil governments, and flourished under the protection of the emperors, mens thoughts and discourses were full of secular affairs; but in the three first centuries of christianity, men who embraced this religion had given up all their interests in this world, and lived in a perpetual preparation for the next.
3. To interpose; to insert.
The duke be here to-night! the better! best!
This woven itself perforce into my business. Shakespeare.
To WEAVE. v. n. To work with a loom.
WEAVER. n. f. [from wave.] One who makes threads into cloth.
Upon these taxations
The clothiers all not able to maintain,
The many to them 'longing, have put off
The spinners, carders, fullers, weavers. Shak. Hen. VIII.
My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle, and are spent without hope. Joh. vii. 6.
The

WED

- The weaver may cast religion upon what loomhe please. How.
Her flag aloft spreads ruffling to the wind,
And sanguine streamers seem the flood to fire:
The weaver charm'd with what his loom design'd,
Goes on to see, and knows not to retire. Dryden.
WEAVERFISH. n. f. [araneus piscis, Latin.] A fish. Ainsworth.
WEB. n. f. [pebba, Saxon.]
1. Texture; any thing woven.
Penelope, for her Ulysses' sake,
Devis'd a web her woers to deceive;
In which the work that the all day did make,
The flame at night she did again unweave. Spenser.
Spiders touch'd, seek their web's inmost part. Davies.
By day the web and loom,
And homely household task shall be her doom. Dryden.
The fates, when they this happy web have spun,
Shall bless the sacred clue and bid it smoothly run. Dryden.
Dan Pope with skill hath weav'd
A silken web; and ne'er shall fade
Its colours. Prior.
2. Some part of a sword. Obsolete.
The sword, whereof the web was steel;
Pommel, rich stone; hilt, gold, approv'd by touch. Fairf.
3. A kind of dusky film that hinders the sight; suffusion.
This is the foul flibbertigibbet; he gives the web and the pin, quints the eye, and makes the hairlip. Shakespeare.
WEED. adj. [from web.] Joined by a film.
Such as are whole-footed, or whole toes are weeded together, their legs are generally short, the most convenient size for swimming. Darham's Physico-Theology.
WE'FOOTED. adj. [web and foot.] Palmipedous; having films between the toes.
We'footed fowls do not live constantly upon the land, nor fear to enter the water. Ray on the Creation.
WE'STER. n. f. [wester, Saxon; a woman-weaver.] A weaver. Obsolete.
After local names, the most in number have been derived from occupations; as Taylor, Wester, Wheeler. Camden.
To WED. v. a. [pejan, Saxon.]
1. To marry; to take for husband or wife.
If one by one you wedded all the world,
Or from the all that are, took something good
To make a perfect woman; she you kill'd
Would be unparallel'd. Shakespeare.
Never did thy beauty, since the day
I saw thee first, and wedded thee, adorn'd
With all perfection, so inflame my senses.
Cloe, blind to wit and worth,
Weds the rich dullness of some son of earth. Pope.
2. To join in marriage.
In Syracuse was I born, and wed
Unto a woman happy but for me. Shakespeare.
Then I shall be no more;
And Adam, wedded to another Eve,
Shall live with her. Milton's Paradise Lost.
The woman in us still prosecutes a deceit like that begun in the garden; and our understandings are wedded to an Eve, as fatal as the mother of their miseries. Glanville.
3. To unite for ever.
Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
And thou art wedded to calamity. Shakespeare. Rem. and Jul.
4. To take for ever.
Though the principal men of the house of commons were again elected to serve in this parliament, yet they were far from wedding the war, or taking themselves to be concerned to make good any declaration made by the former. Clarendon.
They positively and concern'dly wedded his cause. Clarendon.
5. To unite by love or fondness.
Men are wedded to their lusts, and resolved upon a wicked course; and so it becomes their interest to with there were no
God. Tillotson's Sermons.
To WED. v. n. To contract matrimony.
When I shall wed,
That lord whose hand shall take my plight, shall carry
Half my love with him, half my care and duty. Shakespeare.
To love, to wed,
For Hymen's rites, and for the marriage bed
You were ordain'd. Suckling.
Nor took I Guiscard, by blind fancy led,
Or hasty choice as many women wed;
But with deliberate care. Dryden.
WE'DING. n. f. [from wed.] Marriage; nuptials; the nuptial ceremony.
Come, away!
For you shall hence upon your wedding-day. Shakespeare.
I will dance and eat plums at your wedding. Shakespeare.
Let her beauty be her wedding dowry;
For me and my possessions the esteems not. Shakespeare.
When my fon was entered into his wedding-chamber, he fell down and died. 2 Esdr. x. 1.
These three country bills agree, that each wedding produces four children. Graunt's Bills of Mortality.

WEE

- His friends were invited to come and make merry with him;
and this was to be the wedding-feast. L'Estrange.
If the affirmed herself to be a virgin, she must on her wedding-day, and in her wedding cloaths perform the ceremony of going alone into the den, and stay an hour with the lion.
Swift.
A woman seldom asks advice before she has bought her wedding-cloaths. Spectator.
WEDGE. n. f. [wagge, Danish; wegge, Dutch.]
1. A body, which having a sharp edge, continually growing thicker, is used to cleave timber; one of the mechanical powers.
A barbarous troop of clownish fone,
The honour of these noble bows down threw;
Under the wedge I heard the trunk to groan. Spenser.
The fifth mechanical faculty is the wedge used in the cleaving of wood. Wilkins's Mathematical Magick.
He left his wedge within the cloven oak
To whet their courage. Dryden's Æneid.
The oak let many a heavy groan, when he was cleft with a wedge of his own timber. Arbutnot's Hist. of John Bull.
2. A mass of metal.
As sparkles from the anvil used to fly,
When heavy hammers on the wedge are swaid. Fa. Qu.
When I saw a goodly Babylonish garment, and a wedge of gold of fifty shekels weight, then I coveted them. Joh. vii.
3. Any thing in the form of a wedge.
In warlike matters they appear,
In rhombs and wedges and half-moons and wings. Milton.
To WEDGE. v. a. [from the noun.] To fasten with wedges;
to fraiten with wedges; to cleave with wedges; to stop; to obstruct.
My heart,
As wedged with a sigh would rive in twain,
Left Hector, or my father, should perceive me. Shakespeare.
Where have you been broiling?—
—Among the crowd i' the abbey, where a finger
Could not be wedg'd in more. Shakespeare's Henry VIII.
Your wit will not so soon out as another man's will; it is strongly wedged up in a blockhead. Shakespeare.
Part
In common, rang'd in figure wedge their way;
Intelligent of seasons. Milton's Paradise Lost.
Sergeffus in the centaur, soon he pass'd
Wedge in the rocky shoals and sticking fast. Dryden.
Wedge on the keenest scythes,
And give us steeds that snort against the foe. A. Phillips.
What impulse can be propagated from one particle, entomb'd and wedged in the very center of the earth, to another in the center of Saturn. Bentley's Sermons.
WE'DLOCK. n. f. [web and lac, Sax. marriage and gift.] Marriage; matrimony.
She doth stray about
By holy crosses, where she kneels and prays
For happy wedlock hours. Shakespeare.
Strah, your brother is legitimate;
Your father's wife did after wedlock bear him:
And if the did play false, the fault was her's. Shakespeare.
Can wedlock know so great a curse,
As putting husbands out to nurse. Cleveland.
He his happiest choice too late,
Shall meet already link'd, and wedlock-bound
To a fell adversary. Milton's Paradise Lost.
May not a prison or a grave,
Like wedlock, honour's title have? Denham.
One thought the sex's prime felicity
Was from the bonds of wedlock to be free:
And uncontrol'd to give account to none. Dryden.
A man determined about the fiftieth year of his age to enter upon wedlock. Addison.
WEDNESDAY. n. f. [pobeny-bag, Saxon; odenstag, Swedish;
wensday, Dutch; wensday, Islandick.] The fourth day of the week, so named by the Gothick nations from Woden or Odin.
Where is the honour of him that died on wednesday. Shak.
WEE. adj. [A Saxon word of the same root with weening, Dutch;
weenig, German.] Little; small: whence the word weasel or weasel is used for little; as a weasel face. In Scotland it denotes small or little; as wee ane, a little one, or child; a wee bit, a little bit.
Does he not wear a great round beard, like a Glover's pa-ring knife?—No, forsooth; he hath but a little wee face with a little yellow beard. Shakespeare. Merry Wives of Windsor.
WEECHBELM. n. f. [This is often written witch elm.] A species of elm.
A cion of a weechbelm grafted upon an ordinary elm, will put forth leaves as broad as the brim of a hat. Bacon.
WEED. n. f. [weob, Saxon; wees.]
1. An herb noxious or useless.
If he had an immoderate ambition; which is a weed, if it be a weed, apt to grow in the best soils, it doth not appear that it was in his nature. Clarendon.
He
